

SENATE RUSHES MEASURE THROUGH

By Its Passage It Hopes to Avert Great Railroad Strike.

Washington, June 26.—With a view to averting the threatened strike of 30,000 railway employees east of Chicago, the Senate today rushed through the passage of amendments to the bill for the relief of the railroad employees.

The amendments enlarge the board of arbitration provided under the Edman act from three to six. The railroad employees are to be divided into three groups, each to be represented by a board composed of one member from the railroad and two from the employees.

The amendments also provide for the appointment by the President of an impartial arbitrator, to be selected by the Interstate Commerce Commission, to hear and decide all disputes between the railroad and the employees.

Senator Newlands admitted that Secretary Wilson opposed the bill because it would make the railroad employees dependent on the Department of Labor. He explained that the Democrats of the House in caucus had voted to subordinate the mediation to the Department of Labor.

Senator Newlands said the committee had been informed that all the railroad employees of Chicago had agreed with their 30,000 employees that they could not arbitrate under the Edman act, but would seek to settle their disputes under the terms of the proposed amendments.

FRANKLIN WISBY BY NINE VOTES AFTER RECOUNT

When the Second Jefferson Precinct was counted on Wednesday night, James E. Dickerson, who managed the Griggs campaign in the sergeant-at-law, gave close attention to the ballots, the Griggs forces, having been disappointed with the returns from that precinct over since the night of the election, and were certain that there was either some error in the count or that some of those pledged to them had gone back on their word.

Yesterday morning, Mr. Dickerson wrote to Mr. Griggs urging that it was the part of wisdom and in the interests of the party, to have this precinct recounted as regarded the sergeant-at-law contest. Mr. Griggs agreed and addressed a letter to Chairman Martin of the committee, asking that in justice to those who had supported him there be a recount of the ballots for city sergeant in this precinct.

Mr. Griggs was present and assured the committee that he had no desire for a general recount. It was merely to satisfy friends who had worked for him at the precinct that he wished it to be correctly recorded. The committee agreed to the recount, waiving the point that the time limit had expired, friends of Mr. Satterfield saying that they had no votes that had not been honestly cast for him.

The old returns had been, Griggs, 263; Satterfield, 205. The precinct was recounted by James H. Price and J. B. Bottom and two checkers and showed, Griggs, 291; Satterfield, 206, a gain of one for Satterfield, and twenty-six for Griggs, or net gain for Griggs of twenty-five votes.

Very Few "Solid Shots."

There was an almost entire absence of the "solid shot" votes, about which there had been so much discussion. Fourth Clay, the largest M. Martin precinct, was two-thirds counted when the committee adjourned on Wednesday night, and one of the judges stated that a considerable number of "solid shot" votes for M. Martin had been thrown out. A large number of ballots were thrown out at that precinct, but they were mainly where the voter had checked the wrong name.

After the many misadventures of the ballots, Chairman M. Martin stated that he was fully convinced that Richmond should install voting machines, similar to those used in many Northern and Western States. Several members of the committee agreed, and it is probable that the makers will be asked to give an exhibition of the machines here. Major Martin said that while the present system of Martin's ballot had been a great improvement on former methods, it seemed sufficient for many people to understand how to vote it properly, as shown by several hundred ballots which were thrown out entirely. It was also too severe a strain on the election officers, he said, to require them to sit at the polls from sunrise to sunset, and to count ballots all night.

The question of recounting votes is not an easy one to settle. The voting machines are said to give entire satisfaction, to be absolutely accurate, and when the precincts close at sundown, the total vote is at once available.
